

Getting Ready is an evidence-based family engagement approach that promotes positive outcomes for children, families and the parent-educator partnership. Each month, we'll highlight positive outcomes and participants that benefitted from the Getting Ready Approach. Learn more at: gettingready.unl.edu.

Spotlight: Home-Based Educators

In the 2022-23 school year, Getting Ready was scaled-up in 42 communities for Nebraska educators. This issue will spotlight home-based educators (e.g. home visitors, family engagement specialists) who were involved in training and coaching. To view the report of outcomes for all participants, click the link below.

VIEW REPORT

I feel like the Getting Ready Approach has truly fostered stronger relationships between the family and family advocate/home visitors.

– Home-Educator Coach

Participant Perspectives

Q: How have your partnerships with families benefited from Getting Ready?

Home Visitor

Outcomes

Home-based educators who completed Getting Ready training felt that they were better equipped to build strong partnerships with families.

95% of home-based educators reported feeling more skilled in:

Communicating with families

Collaborating with families